

Trade openness is critical to securing Asia's food against climate change

20th June, 2019

Author: C Peter Timmer, Harvard University

Food security is a chronic problem. In the Asia Pacific region, the sheer magnitude of the Highly processed foods from supermarkets and fast food from readily available urban restaurants are not healthy. When such a diet is linked to urban